Network Calendar

Overview: The JBC Network year runs from May 1-April 30.

January: Online registration for JBC Network membership and the annual Network Conference opens. The Conference is open to staff and lay leaders affiliated with the member site. Conference registration fee is not included in membership dues.

- Membership dues must be paid in full and delivered to the Jewish Book Council office no later than March 31. Late fees apply beginning April 1.
- April: Conference registration and payment must be received by April 3. All registrations and payments MUST be submitted by the Network Site. (No individual payments for conference by lay leaders will be accepted.)
 - It is possible to register and/or submit payment for the Conference through April 15 for an additional late fee.
- May: Members receive the complete list of the 2019-2020 authors.
 - Review copies of JBC Network books are mailed out to member sites attending the Conference and to those non-attending members who purchased a set separately.
 - A site not attending the Conference has access to key author information in the Authors on Tour book, delivered by mail, and the JBC Network's members-only website access.
- The JBC Network Conference takes place May 21-23 in New York City. Members in attendance receive Authors on Tour—a book available only to JBC Network members, which includes book descriptions, author bios, list prices, publication information, program ideas, and the author's travel availability—and have the opportunity to hear from over 250 authors during five Meet the Author events at the Conference. (More information below.)
- June: Members have a two-week “reading period” after the Conference, during which time they review the JBC Network authors and their books.
 - Member sites submit initial author requests for the entire year to the Jewish Book Council. The request deadline for the 2019-2020 program is 9:00am EST on Friday, June 7. Members may request authors any time throughout the year, but certain authors' availability may be more limited after this first round of requests.
 - Approximately three weeks after the request deadline, the Jewish Book Council sends tentative schedules to members; members approve and/or make necessary changes.
- July-August: The community-approved tentative schedules are sent to the authors for approval. Once the booking is confirmed by both author and member site, it is considered final. The Jewish Book Council then sends out an official confirmation letter and schedule to each host community and all participating authors, which must be signed and returned to the Jewish Book Council.
- August 2019-May 2020: As soon as bookings are confirmed, coordinators are responsible for contacting authors, using contact information provided by the Jewish Book Council. The details of this initial contact are outlined below. JBC Network travel agents begin working with coordinators and authors to book travel based on the finalized schedules. Additional requests by member sites are accepted (and encouraged) throughout the year.

JBC Network Conference

The annual JBC Network Conference in New York City at HUC (1 W. 4th St.), is a three-day gathering of book program coordinators and lay committee members from around North America. Conference registration is separate from JBC Network dues, but member organizations must have annual dues paid in full, prior to registration, to participate. The Conference fee includes conference material, an Authors on Tour book, lunch and snacks, wine reception with authors, and one set of JBC Network books per site.

The JBC Network Conference includes professional development, networking opportunities, and Meet the Author sessions. Professional development programs vary from year to year, with sessions on book fair coordination, marketing, and technology. During Meet the Author sessions, JBC Network authors present for two minutes each, showcasing both their speaking style and their latest work.

Each JBC Network site attending the Conference receives a set of books by current JBC Network authors, shipped directly to their offices. It is recommended that those sites not attending the Conference purchase a set of books separately to help with author and book selection.

Requesting Authors

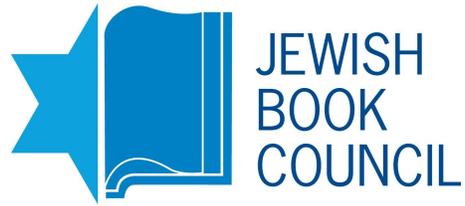

Sites may request authors by indicating a specific author they want or for a specific event date throughout the year. The JBC Network policy is to avoid rescinding author invitations, as it reflects poorly on the site and the Jewish Book Council. For this reason, all committee and supervisory approvals, venues, and community calendars must be in place before making the request. Initial requests are due at 9:00am EST on Friday, June 7; no requests are considered before this date.

Expectations for Sites Hosting Authors

A site is required to do the following when hosting an author:

- Host a physical book sale in conjunction with the author program. The host site MUST have a minimum of fifteen (15) books per author at the event for sale. If a site fails to host a book sale, that site will be penalized $200, which they will need to pay directly to the author.
- Respect that the author has agreed to visit for no honorarium.
- Contact the author in advance to discuss program and travel details, including flight times, hotel name, host city ground transportation information, and meal options.*
- Arrange and pay for all travel and accommodations. (See guidelines below.*)
- Inquire about any special requirements or restrictions the author might have.
- Provide the author with a detailed itinerary prior to their arrival.*
- Publicize the author event in order to draw an appropriate audience.

*Approved letter and itinerary forms can be found in the JBC Network's Book Program Resources.

All communications with JBC Network staff and participating authors MUST come directly from the single assigned designated contact for each site, registered in the JBC Network membership form as the site's lead program coordinator.

Travel and Accommodations

The JBC Network standard travel policy is an economy airplane ticket (direct flights when possible) unless otherwise specified by the author and agreed upon in advance, up to two nights¹ at a first-class hotel (that offers room service and internet in each room), one checked bag (see "Reimbursement" below), meals, and all ground transportation. (Case-by-case exceptions may apply.)

Transportation

The host site arranges (with the help of the JBC Network travel agents) and pays for all airfare, train fare, car service, or gas mileage ($0.54.5/mile unless changed by the IRS).

- NEW!! A car service, including Uber or Lyft, must be provided for an author who is considered "local." Authors should NOT be expected to take public transportation, unless by prior approval by the author.
- All flights will be arranged by Travel Leaders, the JBC Network's travel agency. The travel agent will contact each site to facilitate travel plans and split airfare among sites on a multi-site trip.
- The host site and author will approve (within 24 hours) the completed itinerary before it is finalized.
- Sites hosting an author on a multi-city tour will share the baseline travel expenses. (For example, if an author goes to ten cities on one trip by plane, the total plane fare will be divided by ten.)
- If an author is traveling directly to one site and directly back home, with no other scheduled stops, it is permissible for that site to book the author's travel without the JBC Network agents. Travel should always be booked in consultation with the author.
- If a site chooses to book its own flight, Travel Leaders and the Jewish Book Council are not responsible for any cancellations, alterations, or difficulties with the flight. The host city should notify JBC and Travel Leaders if booking their own flight.

Ground Transportation in Author's Home City

The host site pays for ground transportation in author's home city to/from airport or train station. See "Reimbursement" below.

Ground Transportation in Host City

The host site arranges and pays for all legs of ground transportation in the host city, from airport to hotel, hotel to site, site to hotel, etc. See "Reimbursement" below.

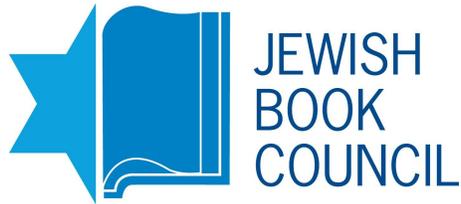

- A community member may drive an author between hotel, event site, and airport as long as the driver is capable of assisting the author with luggage.

Meals

The host site pays for all meals while author is in or traveling to/from the host city. See "Reimbursement" below.

- The host should discuss meals with each author before their arrival.
- Dietary restrictions (kashrut and allergies) should be respected should be discussed ahead of time.

¹ Host site must cover a second night's hotel stay if travel arrangement necessitates extended accommodations.

- If meals are not arranged, the site must provide a $75-maximum per diem.
- While a site may request the author's presence at a community meal before an event, an author is not required to attend. This must be discussed in advance.

Hotel

The host site arranges and pays for one night at a first-class hotel (with room service or onsite restaurant and internet in the room). It is NOT acceptable or permitted to host an author in a community member's home unless the author explicitly requests that arrangement. (Case-by-case exceptions may apply.)

- The host site must provide a credit card to the hotel prior to the author's arrival.
- A representative of the host community should be present during hotel check-in.
- The host site is not responsible for: alcohol, mini-bar, or entertainment purchases; laundry services; car rentals when transportation has been offered by the host; or any room service outside of agreed-upon meals or meals exceeding the predetermined standard cost for an individual.
- On occasion, due to travel constraints or weather emergencies, an extra night in the host city may be required. The host site accepts responsibility for expenses incurred in such situations, including an additional night in a hotel and meals.

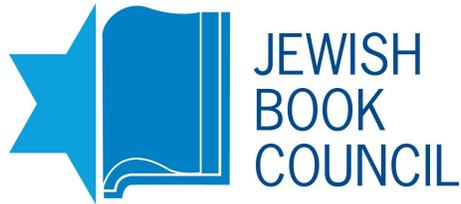

Reimbursement

Member sites must reimburse authors for out-of-pocket expenses incurred during travel (see above for a list of expenses covered), according to the following guidelines:

- The host site must confirm all arrangements with the author beforehand so the site has a precise idea of the reimbursements required.
- The authors will be informed of reimbursement procedures prior to the event so they can present the proper documentation (e.g., receipts, garage tickets, etc.).
- Reimbursement funds must be paid to the author immediately upon submission of receipts at the time of the event or within ten days following.
- The host site should anticipate additional expenses an author will incur after the author leaves the host site (i.e., a meal at the airport) and provide funds in advance (at time of the event).
- To avoid reimbursements, the host site will pay expenses in advance of the author's visit when possible; either to the author or to the service provider (e.g., taxi company).
- Sites will have reimbursement policy in place when authors do not present receipt at time of event or within ten days following.

Single-city trips: The host pays for all expenses incurred. Local transportation and baggage expenses can be doubled and reimbursed at that rate at the time of the event, in order to avoid the author having to send receipts after the event.

Multi-city trips: Ground transport/parking in the home city is divided equally among the hosting sites. The JBC Network travel agents also split airfare equally. Luggage fees and ground transportation in the hosting cities are taken care of by the individual host sites. Non-air travel from one site to the next should be discussed among the cities and divided beforehand.

“Local” Authors: Please be aware that if an author is listed as local to your site, there is NO guarantee that a speaking engagement is considered local travel. In some cases, the author maybe on tour and your site would be considered part of the “total” tour. In that case, please consider optional dates.

Cancellations

Unfortunately, situations arise that make it necessary for the author or the site to cancel an event.

If an author cancels:

- The author must try to reschedule the event, at the discretion of the host.
- If the event cannot be rescheduled, the author is obligated to reimburse the community for the cost of the airfare.
- The author must notify the host community, the Jewish Book Council, and the travel agent of the cancellation immediately.

If, for any reason, the host site must cancel one of its own events:

- It is the site’s responsibility to notify all involved: the author, the Jewish Book Council, and the travel agent.
- The host site may attempt to reschedule with the author, at the author’s discretion.
- If an airline ticket has already been purchased, the host site must pay for it, or for the change fee in the event of a rescheduled ticket.

The Jewish Book Council recommends budgeting for unforeseen book program emergencies such as weather and flight cancellations. Then, if an event must be canceled—or an author is stranded in the host city—due to external circumstances (e.g., weather), the host site will have the means to cover the associated costs. In the case of an extended stay due to weather, the host site is responsible for covering accommodation expenses (extra nights at a hotel, meals, etc.).

The Jewish Book Council LOGO must be included in all brochures, posters, flyers and ads that include any JBC Network author. The logo is available for download on the Jewish Book Council website in both .jpg and .eps formats.
